Leader Dogs for the Blind

Traveling in Urban Environments
Catalina Martinez and Leader Dog Elroy

Message from the President and CEO

Greetings,

As we enjoy this beautiful fall weather in Michigan and prepare for colder weather ahead, I want to reflect on the Leader Dog mission and the “why” behind our programs and services.

For people who are blind or visually impaired, the loss of sight is only the beginning of a life-changing reality. The simplest to the most complex everyday tasks may become daunting and can lead to depression, anxiety and isolation. The number of individuals who are blind or visually impaired is growing every year and the statistics are staggering:

- 285,000,000 people are visually impaired worldwide
- 1,300,000 people are legally blind in the United States
- 75,000 people become blind or visually impaired each year in the U.S.
- 90% live in low-income settings worldwide
- 60% of those who are working age are unemployed in the U.S.
- 10% travel independently with a cane or guide dog

Whether they were born without sight or lost sight later in life, people who are blind or visually impaired endure hardships most can barely imagine. That’s where we come in. From white cane training (as part of our Accelerated Orientation and Mobility Training) to matching people with a Leader Dog, we provide the tools and skills to introduce or reintroduce people to a life of independence, confidence and companionship.

As the holidays approach, you may be making travel plans to connect with family and friends. You will navigate planes, trains and automobiles. You may head out to the countryside or into a big city. Our clients will do the same. Regardless of where our clients travel, Leader Dog provides the training to ensure they can do so safely and independently.

In this issue, you will learn more about our urban travel guide dog class in Chicago. Designed for people who live, work or travel in large city environments, this specially focused training helps clients and their Leader Dogs learn how to safely navigate crowded streets, subways, elevated trains and other elements unique to large cities.

I wish you and your families a safe and happy holiday season, wherever your travels may take you.

Taking Her Bite of the Big Apple

Kim takes the subway each day to and from work.

Q&A with Leader Dog Client Kathryn “Kim” Paulk

New York can be an overwhelming city to navigate for anyone, but imagine taking on this environment if you are nearly blind and have severe hearing loss. That’s what Kim Paulk does every day with assurance, finesse and Leader Dog Gemma.

What is your favorite thing about living in NYC?

My very high level of independence and inclusion, which allows me to work, live, socialize and enjoy many forms of recreation—all independently! I enjoy life more every day because I find myself walking or riding to go and do the things that are true to my heart.

What is the best thing about having a Leader Dog in a big city?

The ability to go anywhere I wish at any time I like with genuine confidence.

What is the hardest thing about having a Leader Dog in a big city?

The challenge of educating cab drivers, bicyclists and others around the rules and laws pertaining to service dogs. I have found great success thanking those drivers who do pick me up, bicyclists and so forth, because we then engage in an educational conversation that results in great service, good will and lets them experience first-hand just how personable people with disabilities can be.

Kim and LD Gemma enjoy Central Park.

What type of work do you do?

After raising my family, enjoying volunteer work and welcoming seven grandkids into my life, I have my first job with a financial paycheck! I am a full-time technology sales advisor at a major global corporation.

How do you get from home to work each day?

Each day Gemma leads me on a five-minute walk to the subway station. We catch the train for a 10-minute ride and then we have another five-minute walk at the other end. Gemma has the timing down pat and hops up into position ready to guide as the subway car doors open.

What would you say to a person who lives in a large city and is considering getting a Leader Dog?

Having a Leader Dog in the city provides a level of safety and independence that is incredibly liberating and builds great confidence. I have never been treated with a higher level of respect in my life, and it is all because I am perceived as what I really am—very independent—by most of the community, my co-workers and friends.

Lady has truly changed my life. I'm more independent and more confident out in public. Her guiding work is amazing and when we were at Bark & Brew all the Future Leader Dogs, people and music did not faze her one bit!

Lady and I have been a team for almost two years. We have come so far. In August of 2016, I had the opportunity to meet Lady's puppy raiser at Fort Dodge Correctional Facility and it was very emotional for me to say thank you for raising Lady. Kevin [the inmate raiser] and I were both crying and everyone around us was in tears. When I told Kevin I flew to Iowa, just Lady and I, he asked if that was the first time flying on my own. I replied YES! He whispered, "I'm so proud of you. It sounds like Leader Dog Lady has changed your way of life." I replied, "Absolutely."

I believe in the quote "A dog can change the way you see the world." I see the world through Leader Dog Lady's eyes... it's the best way to see! I love life and my adventures with Lady because it's always something new—and I can do it with confidence and, most of all, independence. Thank you to everyone at Leader Dogs for the Blind for changing my life!

Sincerely,
Dawn & Leader Dog Lady Rudolph

Greetings from Canada. I just wanted you to know that Mr. Ziggy has exceeded all our expectations as a Leader Dog. He's a healthy, happy, hardworking companion. He really enjoys exploring new environments. Whether we are in the bush camping or in a downtown setting, he does his job well. At home he is very relaxed and loves our winters. This September marked five years since Mr. Ziggy and I were matched.

Yours truly,
Bruce Boyd

My son, Brock Ewing, attended your summer camp and he enjoyed it to the fullest! I was so pleased by your staff, activities planned, and how clean and nice the campus was. The staff was so caring and sweet—I could tell you guys love what you do and it made me feel comfortable leaving my son in another state.

Brock couldn't stop talking about the great things he experienced; how nice people were to him; how he met new, cool friends; and how he learned new stuff and taught others. He was so happy it brought me to tears. So, I want to thank all of your staff and sponsors for making our lives better! This is a special program that I will rave about! I appreciate you giving my son this amazing experience!!!

Sincerely,
A pleased mother, Dawn Wolfe

Johnathan Dixon and LD Rockne

Rockne is doing extremely well and is absolutely adorable. He has pretty much become our local celebrity. We can't go anywhere without women flocking to us. Our church has also pretty much adopted him and tried to claim him as their own. It's been really great to have their support.

He has absolutely been the perfect dog for me. His intelligence and obedience is phenomenal. We have so much fun together. That's why I'm attaching photos to share our happiness with you. Thank you so much for giving me such an outstanding dog.

Traveling in an Urban Environment

In 2013, Leader Dog conducted our first urban travel guide dog class in Chicago. Designed for people who live, work or travel in large city environments, this specially focused training helps clients and their Leader Dogs learn how to safely navigate crowded streets, subways, elevated trains and other elements unique to large cities.

Catalina Martinez spent over four decades living in Chicago and still visits family in the area. The layout of the city is second nature to her and she seldom gets disoriented. She respects how tricky and dangerous it can be navigating Chicago; this is why she was so pleased to be able to train there with her first Leader Dog, Elroy.

“Elroy loves working in the city. When he’s walking and he’s happy, I can feel him prance; so then I believe he’s enjoying himself – he’s focused and he’s stimulated.”
~Catalina Martinez

Catalina takes a break to give LD Elroy some love after working the busy Minneapolis streets where they live.

“You get everything in Chicago,” says Catalina, “Droves of people, people on bikes... and the traffic.” But she cites one of the biggest hazards as the constant noise that can be overwhelming and distracting to both her and her guide dog. “Being able to train with Elroy in an environment that is a bit busier than downtown Minneapolis (near where I live now), really helped me learn how to keep him focused on me and working, and not on the surrounding environment when we travel.”

Another element of training in Chicago that proved very useful was learning how to safely navigate street construction. “Minneapolis is just finishing remodeling the downtown for the Super Bowl in February. Elroy’s an expert at moving through the construction—orange cones, broken cement, temporary sidewalks, having to go into the street if the sidewalk is blocked—we experienced all of that in Chicago.” Once, after maneuvering a very complicated construction area like a champ, Catalina felt Elroy stop and look up at her as if saying, “Where’s my praise?” So, Catalina “whooped it up” in front of everyone because she was so proud of him.

Prior to her recent retirement, Catalina worked for the federal government, which required a bus to downtown Minneapolis followed by several blocks of walking to get to her office. “Minneapolis can get pretty cold, like 10 below zero cold. On these days, Elroy and I would take Metro Mobility* to work because I didn’t want him to hurt his paws.”

Living in an urban area can make it difficult to find open spaces that are safe for your dog to play, especially when, like Catalina, you won’t frequent dog parks because you don’t know the health and temperaments of the dogs there. Instead, Catalina sets up “play dates” for Elroy with some of her friends who also have service dogs. They have access to a big backyard where the dogs can run and play. “He’s a hard worker,” says Catalina, “So I believe he deserves a chance to play hard.”

Urban Training in Chicago with GDMI Jamie Togonal

Client John DiMarco works his Leader Dog, Shadow, through the crowds of a busy downtown Chicago afternoon during urban training.

Jamie has been a LDB guide dog mobility instructor (GDMI) for 14 years and a team supervisor for 7 years.

GDMI Jamie gives clients John DiMarco and Catalina Martinez some freedom to work their Leader Dogs back to the hotel after an afternoon of training. The clients instruct their dogs to follow Jamie down the sidewalk.

Q&A with GDMI Jamie Togonal

Why did LDB start training in Chicago?

We wanted to provide an immersive experience for clients who live, work or travel in large, urban areas. We have urban experiences in Michigan in bits and pieces, such as riding the elevated train in Detroit or crossing seven lanes of traffic in Birmingham, but we don't consistently have the large number of people and heavy street traffic like in Chicago.

How did LDB set up training in a remote location?

We conducted scouting trips about a year ahead of the first class to look for suitable work areas and learn the transportation system, such as access points to the "L."* We looked at hotels both inside and outside the city limits to find one that accommodated our training needs. We also mapped training routes throughout the city so we could expose the client/dog teams to as many unique environments as possible.

Do clients stay in or outside of the city?

We stay in Oak Park, a suburb of Chicago. This area allows us to gradually ramp up the difficulty of the environment that the dogs and the clients experience. We work in Oak Park the first day to get everyone settled in, then move into the city. Our hotel is located close to the Green Line so we ride it every day to get into and out of Chicago. This allows the teams to practice commuter travel and simulates a routine someone might have every day going to work.

Why is this training important?

Traveling in an urban environment can be difficult for someone who is blind. For these clients to be able to face these challenges for the first time with the guidance of their GDMI gets them off to a strong, safe start. I find that tackling this challenging environment together accelerates the bond between the client and their Leader Dog because of the faith and confidence they build in each other.

Acclimating Puppies to an Urban Environment

“The first thing is always to keep your puppy in mind when taking them into an urban environment,” says Leader Dog Puppy Raiser Frank Grzesik. “You need to watch that it doesn’t have sensory overload. Some dogs need to be acclimated in doses while others just take all the ‘big city busy’ in stride.”

Luckily for puppy raisers in the Chicago metropolitan area, they have Puppy Counselors Frank and Erin Grzesik to help them introduce their Future Leader Dogs to the Windy City. By planning group outings in high traffic environments such as the Shedd Aquarium and O’Hare International Airport, the Grzesiks assist raisers while also raising their 11th puppy, Future Leader Dog Bowie, a German shepherd.

“We try to do outings at Shedd once a year. We’ve even had raisers travel from Michigan to join us,” says Frank. “The dolphin show is a big draw, but it seems more for we humans because the dogs don’t show much interest during the program.” However, when walking through the tank areas of the aquarium, the puppies are often intrigued by the fish and want to sniff the tanks. Shedd is also great for distraction training, with kids dropping popcorn on the floor, raisers are taught how to curb their puppy’s “appetite” for grabbing things off the floor.

Simulated plane travel is made available for puppy outings at O’Hare International Airport due to the great relationship Frank has with American Airlines. Raisers and puppies are able to board a plane, the doors are then closed, the cabin is pressurized and the plane is taxied back and forth in the gate area during the simulation. This, along with going through security and walking through the terminal, are great experiences for the puppies.

If you come across a Future Leader Dog wearing a blue bandana, whether in Chicago or in your own neighborhood, help the raiser teach it good manners. Approach slowly to help keep the puppy calm, try to keep eye contact with the raiser and always ask before petting.

Symbolic Puppy Sponsorships—A Great Gift Idea

You now have the opportunity to support Leader Dog in a new way through sponsorship of a Future Leader Dog. For $500, you receive a frameable 5x7 photo, several wallet-sized photos to share, a personality profile and an official certificate of sponsorship. This would make a great gift for that hard-to-buy-for person who loves Leader Dog (or just loves dogs in general). With six puppies to choose from, you’re sure to find one that fits your personality!

For more information, go to LeaderDog.org/sponsor-a-puppy.

IRA and Donor-Advised Fund Gifts

Presented by  CHIEF FINANCIAL CREDIT UNION

Many people age 70½ and older find that the distribution they are required to draw from their Individual Retirement Account (IRA) exceeds their needs. So, they end up paying income taxes on funds they currently do not need. If this is your situation, there is a special provision allowing you to make a gift to Leader Dog directly from your IRA without having to pay taxes. This provision lets you maximize tax savings while making a positive impact on people who are blind or visually impaired.

Because of their tax benefits, donor-advised funds (DAF) are becoming another popular vehicle for charitable giving. Making a gift to Leader Dog through your DAF helps ensure that we are here for generations to come.

"I find that gifting the minimum required distribution from my IRA to Leader Dogs for the Blind is a great way to reduce my taxable income," says Dr. Allen Turcke, Leader Dog donor. "My donor-advised fund is another good way to support Leader Dog, and my other favorite charities, by donating some of my assets while I am still alive... and I get to see where my money is going."

Please contact Lora Cabarios, director of national personal giving, at 248/650.7109 or Roberta Trzos, manager of gift planning, at 248/659.5014 for further information.

We are going GREEN for our February 2018 issue of Update! The issue will only be produced digitally so make sure you are signed up to receive Update electronically by going to LeaderDog.org and clicking the "sign up for email updates" button on the lower left-hand side of the page. The June and October issues will continue to be produced in all formats.

Mission Moment

"[It's] really cool her name is Freedom because that's what it means to have a guide dog. The cane was freedom for 30 years but a dog changes that freedom dramatically! I [can now] travel even more by not having to hold on to a person."

Keeping Your Eyes Healthy—Diabetic Retinopathy

Presented by

Midwest
EYE CONSULTANTS

Diabetes affects approximately one out of every 11 people in the United States. In fact, according to the Centers for Disease Control, one out of every four people with the condition does not even know that they have it. This is because diabetes, along with its effects on the eyes, produces no symptoms at early stages.

Diabetes is a disease in which the body can no longer properly process food for energy. Due to this, glucose (the body's form of cellular energy) builds up in the blood stream. The chronic build up of glucose in the bloodstream damages blood vessel walls thus restricting blood flow. This eventually damages organs, including the eyes.

Diabetic eye disease is a group of conditions that, in severe stages, can cause blindness. Risk factors include the duration that the person is diabetic, blood glucose control, other cardiovascular diseases and smoking. The most common type of diabetic eye disease is diabetic retinopathy.

Article by Dr. Kendra Cunegin, O.D.

TAKE Care of your EYES!

An important study on diabetic retinopathy, the DCCT (Diabetes Control and Complications Trial), demonstrated the importance of controlling blood glucose in the prevention of diabetic eye disease. In this study, it was demonstrated that a decrease in the patient's HbA1C by 10% was able to lessen the risk of diabetic retinopathy by approximately 44%.

Your primary care physician can give you the value of your HbA1C and instructions on how to keep this value inside normal range. In addition, routine eye examinations with your optometrist or ophthalmologist are vital for early detection and to allow prompt intervention which minimizes any impact on your vision.

A Grand Finale for the Grand Tour

After 7,000 miles and many aching muscles, the Grand Tour.ORGanization had their final endurance watercraft ride on Lake Michigan this past August. The annual fundraiser began with a few personal watercraft enthusiasts who wanted to earn “bragging rights” for completing a 350-mile ride, and developed over 20 years into a “summer family” that together supported Leader Dog. This family grew to include the riders, land support crew, local Lions clubs and Leader Dog puppy raisers.

The Grand Tour has always been an endurance ride, not a race. The riders end each day together, making a grand entrance riding into the evening’s location as a group. This year’s final destination, the Holland Marina, proved to be difficult to reach when the riders encountered rough waters. After everyone was safely on shore, they celebrated with a banquet which included awards for the top fundraisers.

Grand Tour Event Director Michael LaBelle has been involved since the ride’s inception in 1997; he took over as director in 1999. Though he was unable to participate in the entire final ride, Michael hopped on a watercraft to lead the group into Holland one last time. At the banquet he presented Leader Dog with a donation of $19,500 from this year’s event. This brings their grand total to over $344,000 raised for Leader Dog!

The Grand Tour.ORGanization has had a tremendous impact on Leader Dog. In honor of their commitment, they will have permanent recognition on our campus—their name on a suite for dogs in training in the canine development center. The annual ride will be missed, but this group of dedicated riders and land support crew will always be a part of the Leader Dog community.

Participants of the final Grand Tour pose for a group picture in Mackinaw City before starting their 3-day endurance ride.

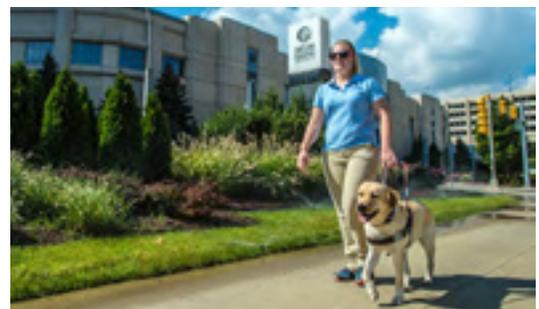

Training at MGM Grand Detroit

Leader Dog really hit the jackpot when the MGM Grand Detroit partnered with us and welcomed our guide dog mobility instructors and Leader Dogs in training into their beautiful facilities in Detroit. The dogs gain valuable experience learning how to ignore distractions when working around the hotel and through the lights and sounds of the casino.

“MGM Grand Detroit is proud to support an organization that is not only important in our local community, but beyond Metro Detroit,” says Mike Neubecker, MGM Grand Detroit President and Chief Operating Officer. “We will pull out all of the stops as home of their Dinner in the Dark event in March 2018 to ensure it is a memorable and successful night.”

Instructors on Team 2 take a moment from training to rest their dogs by the fountain located in the hotel lobby.

Every Purchase Equals Support

After opening its headquarters in Rochester Hills in 2015, Chief Financial Credit Union launched a unique partnership with us, first creating the Leader Dog Visa credit card and now introducing the Free Kasasa Giving® Rewards checking account with Leader Dog debit card.

With the Free Kasasa Giving® checking account, you earn an impressive interest rate on your account balance, nationwide ATM fee refunds and donations for Leader Dog with every debit card purchase over $5. Simply put, Chief Financial makes rewarding yourself and supporting Leader Dog as easy as making everyday transactions. Chief Financial is thrilled to be the only financial institution offering a giving program like this with us.

These creative ways to give are part of the Share the Rewards program that has helped Chief Financial contribute more than $100,000 to us. "Chief Financial is a full-service credit union with a heart. Even while they're busy excelling at what they do, they are passionate about giving their time and support back to the community they serve," said Sue Daniels, Leader Dog president & CEO. "This makes us proud to call them a Leader Dog corporate partner."

"We take our responsibility to offer products that give our members financial acumen, great rewards, competitive savings and ways to give back to our community very seriously," said Tom Dluzen, president & CEO, Chief Financial Credit Union. "Chief Financial and Leader Dog supporters share a deep passion for our canine companions and the life-changing services that Leader Dog provides to people who are blind or visually impaired." The Share the Rewards program makes it easier than ever for the community to support and give back to Leader Dog. More than money, it's a way to pay it forward. Leader Dog Loses Two Dear Friends and Board Members

Recently, the Leader Dog team lost two long-standing members of our Board of Trustees—Tom McNulty and Debbie Dayton. Tom and Debbie were both fiercely passionate about the Leader Dog mission, working to help us positively impact the lives of our clients.

Tom McNulty

April 10, 1939–August 28, 2017

Tom served on our Board of Trustees for 25 years! He was a tremendous leader and a major catalyst for the significant and meaningful changes Leader Dog made throughout his tenure. Tom was integral in the hiring of our first-ever chief financial officer, establishing governance practices, implementing term limits for Trustees and establishing the Leader Dogs for the Blind Foundation.

In addition to his passionate leadership, Tom and his family supported Leader Dog generously and steadfastly through their philanthropy. The McNultys made significant gifts for both the residence and the canine development center, provided support for general operations, attended many events and introduced new people to the organization. His guidance, dedication and friendship will be greatly missed.

Debbie Dayton

January 4, 1954–August 11, 2017

Debbie began her connection with Leader Dog in September 2001 when she was matched with her first Leader Dog, Joshua. Over the next 16 years, she was matched with Leader Dog Patrick and recently with Leader Dog Desmond. All three of Debbie's cherished Leader Dogs were male golden retrievers.

Debbie was appointed to our Board of Trustees in 2005. In this role, and in her role as an active Lion, Debbie was an outstanding ambassador for Leader Dog, our clients and our canines. She attended district and state Lions conventions, gave keynote speeches at multiple events each year and served as a Lions District Leader Dog Chair for over 10 years.

Debbie also took time to mentor many potential Leader Dog clients. We referred numerous individuals to her for support and information, both about working with a Leader Dog and living with loss of sight in general. Debbie had a wonderful way of calming fears and providing support while answering questions and giving great information and insight. Many clients made the decision to come to Leader Dog as a result of a conversation with Debbie. Her kind demeanor, giving spirit, positive outlook and determination to succeed will forever remain as part of her legacy.

Lions International Convention—Fun, Organized Chaos

30,000 Lions Club International members from around the world... 4th of July weekend in Chicago... a 2.6 million square foot convention center with seating for 18,000 people. Sound daunting? Imagine navigating this environment without being able to see. Imagine being a guide dog leading through the organized chaos. Leader Dog teams (and Lions) Richard Kent and LD Easy, and Pauline Ulrey and LD Satch, have navigated many tricky environments, but nothing on this scale.

"I had never been in this type of environment with Easy before," says Richard Kent. "My ability to get around the convention so easily is due to the training that Leader Dog provided to both me and Easy. We learned that anytime you are in an area with a lot of congestion you have to take it slow. Easy gets excited a little bit, but the control we both learned helps tremendously."

Pauline Ulrey had a similar experience, "From leading our relatively quiet lifestyle in a residential neighborhood with no sidewalks, attending this convention was the total opposite. Navigating revolving doors, escalators and thousands of people was a challenge; but we finally found a consistent route from the entrance [of the convention hall] to the Leader Dog exhibit space."

Though neither Richard or Pauline attended urban training in Chicago, their years of experience working with their dogs helped them to successfully travel through the chaotic fun that is the Lions International Convention.

"Everyone was so delighted to see such beautiful dogs and were amazed how they adapt and work with us," says Lion Richard Kent, pictured here with several Lions club members from Chile.
